The record was made by the Yale team at New Haven, Conn., on Feb. 28, 1917, in a 25 yard tank.

NEW LONDON FIVE ARE EASTERN BOWLING CHAMPS.

Clinch First Place by Winning Two from Palace-Pattison Star of Match.

In the Eastern Connecticut Bowling tournament Monday evening New Blades of Woonsocket, R. I., in the London clinched the championship by defeating the Palace team two games out of three. The Aetna team also made sure of second place when they trimmed Taftville three straight. Pattison of the Palace was the star performer and in his last string threatened to capture high score for the tournament, but in the last boxes Brown of this city knocked out Young Blades of Woonsocket, R. In the Army-like to it. It was anything else. Erehart was there because we had anticipated the pass. "Football campaigns," continued Stiehm, "must be as carefully planned beforehand as the campaigns in Flanders. One must study the opponent's strength and weakness and the knowledge gained thereby must be known not only to the coach but the players as well. It is a basic principle of all Penn was not expected to have any chance whatever. An overwhelming defeat at the hands of Georgia Tech at the start of the year, the fact that the team was much the lighter of the two, and the known prestige of Pitt were the reasons assigned for another crushing setback.

FOOTBALL FIGHTING SPIRIT.

By SOL SETZGER. Coach Washington and Jefferson Football Team.

Leo Leary, the old Harvard coach whose Charlestown navy yard eleven recently defeated the 76th division eleven from Camp Devens, coached by Percy Haughton, told me not long ago that the big moment in football was when the team you were coaching was ahead when the last whistle blew. But there is one thing finer in football than victory, and that is its fighting there is one thing finer in football than victory, and that is its fighting spirit.

Fighting spirit is bred in football players, it is the soul of the game and about the fighting spirit of football teams there rallies college spirit, which is close kin to patriotism. Indeed, were it not for the fighting spirit of college elevens there would be little college spirit. Football fighting spirit has taught the college man to appreciate patriotism and loyalty. It has enabled the coilege man to do his part in this war in no small degree just as the discipline and spirit of college sport, according to Secretary Baker, gave the government its plan for solving the recreation problem in our military and naval camps.

There are two kinds of fighting spirit in football—individual and team. We, who have much to do with the making of college teams, hold this fighting spirit above systems of play and our knowledge of the game. Without it a team is doomed to failure—failure in good old American grit and nerve. Though it may win, the team which shows the fighting spirit gets all the praise.

This fall I had the good fortune to witness two good examples of football fighting spirit. In the Pittsburg-Pennsylvania game the latter eleven gave a flowing with what they call "The Spirit of '76" in Red and Blue foot-ball, made up in savage determination bail, made up in savage determination and sheer regklessness what they lacked in almost everything else. While they went down to defeat, two touchdowns to one, there was not one present, including the clean playing and sportsmanilke Pitt players, who dring the clean playing and sportsmanilke Pitt players, who dring to think it a defeat tinged with victory. At that the breaks of the game favored Pitt. Its first score was a most fortunate execution of a long forward pass and its second a blocked kick, while excellent football, was not finer bit of playing than the little Quakers themselves showed when they, too, blocked a punt. In the first case the ball bounded back close to Penn's goal where a Pitt player gained it; in the second the ball fell dead behind the line of scrimmage. Everybody admired Penn for that gallant fight.

The play of "Olle" Oliphant against Notre Dame was nothing short of miraculous. Without in any sense wishing to detract from the splendid playing of the well balanced team of Notre Dame, it is my beliefe that on a dry field Oliphant would have come very close, single handed, to winning that game for the Army. His play was and sheer reaklessness what they lacked in almost everything else. While very close, single handed, to winning that game for the Army. His play was of the savage fighting style, yet never did he lose control of himself or fail to make use of every faculty to turn to make use of every faculty to turn the tide. It is mighty comforting to know that men of Oliphant's type are bred on the football fields of West Point and Annapolis each year.

A year ago a coach and a team from the eastern section of the middle west sprang into sudden fame when Indiana, tutored by "Humbo" Stiehm, defeated the splendid eleven of Tufts, conqueror of Harvard. All the ods favored Tufts and when a touchdown and goal from the field had sent the down-easterners, home without the down-easterners home without the bacon many left that game with the impression that Indiana won a fluky victory. Stiehm, the coach, was new to the east. True, he had been a Wis-consin star in his college days and later had won renown at Nebraska, but these facts had been almost totally overlooked in the east. Shiehm now stands high as a coach anywhere.

"In our Tufts game last fall you will remember that Tufts had a series of plays in which the center faced his backfield and tossed the ball to the quarter. The plays were extremely dangerous when once under way. The chances of their going wrong were small. Tufts had used them to good advantage against both Harvard and Princeton.

Princeton.

"Our plan was to smash up this attack before it got under way. To do so we had to nail the quarter in his tracks before he could pass the ball to another back. We accomplished this by having Stutesman, our center, dive over the Tufts center, as he passed the ball, and tackle the quarter receiving

"We also knew that Tufts did not we also knew that Julis and not sufficiently protect the players who received forward passes. We took advantage of this by covering each of their eligible men with two or three players each time. Turns tried or four players each time Tufts tried the pass. When Erchart caught a Tufts forward pass and sprinted 46
